TAFT NAMED SUCCESSOR TO WHITE ON HIGH COURT

Former President To Be Chief Justice At Washington

NOTABLE CAREER

Former President In Public Office Nearly Whole Life

(Reuter's Service)

Washington, June 30.—Ex-President Taft has been appointed Chief Justice of the United States in succession to the late Chief Justice E. D. White.

William Howard Taft is one of the most distinguished of living Americans, and has a longer record of notable public service than any of his countrymen. In 1881, when he was but 24 years old, he was elected assistant county solicitor of Hamilton county, Ohio, and from that time until 1908, when he was elected as the twenty-seventh president of the United States he served almost continuously in public office.

He was successively judge of the Superior court, Cincinnati, Solicitor General of the United States, Circuit judge, 6th district of Ohio, President of the Philippine Commission, first civil governor of the Philippines, special delegate to Rome to confer with

Wm. HOWARD TAFT

Pope Leo on Philippine lands, Secretary of War under President Roosevelt, Provisional Governor of Cuba, Special delegate to Central American countries and to Russia and President.

It was Mr. Taft's misfortune to be president at a time when the resentment of the American people against the encroachments of the big business interests and special privilegists upon the legislative heritages of the people, which had long been fomenting, came to a head. His misfortune, and also his mistake, for if he had shown the progressiveness of spirit and independence of action, while president, that characterised his conduct afterwards he might have been a great president. Instead, he adopted an almost wholly passive attitude toward the reactionary Republicans, who, drunk from long tenure of power, had made the legislative branch of the government, and particularly the Senate, a sort of glorified office boy to those business interests which were as unscrupulous as they were powerful, and whose minions were the leaders in both branches of Congress.

For his refusal to strike the scepter of real power from the agents of the predatory corporations Taft was chief victim of the bloodless revolution that swept the country in November, 1912, driving practically every one of the private servants of big business from their high public jobs, and giving the Democrats a hold on all branches of the government the like of which they had never possessed before. In that election Taft carried only two states out of forty-eight.

During the war, and while the peace makers were in session in Paris, Mr. Taft, by his stirring patriotic addresses and writings, and particularly because of his vigorous championship of the principles involved in the league of nations, in the face of tremendous party opposition, won great popularity, with the result that he commanded audiences, both with his voice and his pen, that

NEW TARIFF LAW IS EXPECTED TO NET $700,000,000

Bill, Introduced In House, Raises Rates All Along The Line

(Reuter's Service)

Washington, June 30.—The Administration's Permanent Tariff Bill, which has been introduced in the House of Representatives, does not contain an official estimate of the revenue but it is unofficially expected that receipts will aggregate 700,000,000 dollars annually, as compared with 300,000,000 dollars before the war. The bill raises the duties on most imports which are now subject to taxation, but does not make any notable additions to the free list.

Mr. Kao Ting-chiu, the special commissioner for Shensi, however, is unable to leave for Shensi at present owing to the tension between Generals Yen Hsiang-wen and Chen Shoo-fan, while it is stated that General Lu Hung-tao is not at all agreeable to the visit of Mr. Pan Ling-ko to Kansu.

SINO-GERMAN PACT CALLED VIOLATION OF PARIS TREATY

Property Here Already Under Lien For Reparations

INQUIRY STARTS

Holdings Worth Tael's 12,000,000 Already Transferred

(From a Staff Correspondent)

Peking, July 1.—The recently promulgated Sino-German treaty became effective today. Under its terms, which were covered in the recently published digest by Minister Yen, of the foreign affairs bureau, the validity of German trade marks is renewed upon registration at the custom houses.

Pending the appointment of diplomatic and consular representatives Chang Yue-kai will act as Peking's representative at Berlin, and von Borh will hold a similar commission at Peking. It is predicted here that Boye, undersecretary of the German foreign office, will be appointed minister to China.

(Reuter's Service)

Paris, June 25, delayed.—A semi-official statement issued here says:

"According to the Treaty of Versailles Germany was obliged to take over the rights and interests of German subjects in Russia, China, Austria, Bulgaria and Turkey and to transfer those rights and interests to the Reparations Commission.

"The separate peace concluded between Germany and China stipulates that Germany should take over from China fifty percent of the unliquidated German property in China, the remainder being returned to its German owners. Moreover, property to the value of Taels 12,000,000 has already been liquidated. This considerably infringes the rights of the Reparations Commission which, of course, will be maintained. A committee of tankers is examining the methods of transfer."

Note.—The official summary of the Sino-German trade agreement, issued by the Waichiaopu on May 20, contained the following:

(2).—By the reimbursement of indemnity expenses, as is stated in the declaration, is meant that Germany in addition to indemnifying China according to the principles of the Versailles Treaty is also willing to refund to China the internment expenses. As to the war indemnity, Germany agrees to pay in advance a portion thereof in a lump sum, which represents the equivalent of one-half of the liquidated German property and one-half of the values of the sequestrated but not yet liquidated German property, which amount will eventually be agreed upon and which will consist of $4,000,000 in cash and the balance in Tsin-pu and Hu-kwang bonds.

(3).—Chinese property in Germany shall be returned at the ratification of the agreement.

(Extract from German representative's note to the Waichiaopu).

Paris, June 25.—The Reparations Commission has discussed the application of Article 156 of the Peace Treaty, with respect to the German properties in the Chinese Province of Shantung.

The German properties included in the British Concession of Shameen are valued at 449,000 gold marks, with which sum Germany is to be credited.

Note: Article 156 of the Peace Treaty provides that: Germany renounce, in favor of Japan, all her rights, title and privileges in the Province of Shantung, including all German rights in the Tsingtao-Tsinanfu Railway, together with its subsidiary property, and also that the German State submarine cables from Tsingtao to Shanghai and from Tsingtao to Chefoo, with all rights, privileges and properties attaching thereto, be similarly acquired by Japan.

Peking, July 1.—Ratifications of the Sino-German Trade Agreement were exchanged at the Waichiaopu this afternoon.

Baseball Fan Wishes There Were 17 More, So We Could Have Game

Notice of the capture in the Whangpoo of a six-foot alligator—now comfortably housed in the compound of the American Trading Company on Szechuen Road—has brought forth no claimants for the beast, but it has brought out a number of reports of other alligator (ex-) whereabouts.

One informant states that while walking along the Avenue Edward VII at a reasonable hour three nights ago he saw a number of coolies carrying a plank to which was roped a reptile six feet long. On inquiry he was told that it had been captured near a small village some distance up the Whangpoo and had been sold to a local amusement place.

Another story suddenly cropped up to the effect that still another alligator had been taken in Pootung. This rumor, however, when run down appeared to relate to the discovery some years ago of an ambiguous animal which was never definitely diagnosed as an alligator.

A citizen of fifteen years' standing states that he can remember when signs were prominently posted on the Pootung side bearing the words: "Bathers Beware of Alligators." Nobody else could be found whose recollection ran back to the time when bathing was ever that popular in Pootung.

Passive Rice Strike Begun As Shops In Settlement Announce They're Sold Out

Guilds And Chambers Of Commerce Make Another Appeal To Municipal Council; Dealers Outside Prepare To Cease Business Also

Practically no rice was sold in the Settlement yesterday.

About 60 percent of the total number of rice shops were closed to business, while the rest did not offer any of the cereal for sale. Tabulation of stock statistics by the Municipal authorities showed that there was very little rice in store inside the Settlement limits. Most of the shops had sold out—having taken in no new supplies for some days past—while others were said to have shipped their surpluses to godowns in Chinese territory.

With the passive strike already launched further effort was made yesterday to bring about a settlement, the Chinese Chambers of Commerce and representatives of the Rice guilds going into conference during the afternoon and drawing up resolutions urging the resumption of business and providing for another attempt to negotiate with the Council for cancellation of the present licensing regulations.

WRITE COUNCIL AGAIN

In this connection the General Chamber of Commerce has addressed another letter to the Council—the text of which will be found below—asking once more for withdrawal of the license ruling and presenting arguments intended to show that the regulation cannot accomplish the end sought—that of preventing profiteering and hoarding of rice in Shanghai.

The meeting was held in the Chamber of Commerce building on North Honan Road and was attended by representatives of the Chinese General Chamber of Commerce, the Nantao Chamber, the Chia Kuo Tang and Jen Kuo Tang Rice Guilds and the Association for Miscellaneous Foodstuffs.

The resolutions passed were as follows:

1.—That the Chia Kuo Tang Rice Guild undertake to urge the rice shops in the Settlement to take in stock today and resume business tomorrow.

2.—That the Chamber of Commerce in the Settlement once more negotiate with the Council for the withdrawal of the license.

3.—That the Settlement Chamber of Commerce cause to be inserted in the local Chinese press advertisements appealing to the rice shops to resume business.

4.—That the rice guilds ask all rice shops in the French Concession and Chinese territory to refrain from striking on July 5.

APPEAL AGAIN TO COUNCIL

The text of the letter directed by the Chamber to the Council is as follows:

"June 30, 1921.

"The Acting Secretary,

"Shanghai Municipal Council,

"Dear Sir: Your letter of June 25 was duly received and in compliance with your request, we have placed the matter referred to before the representatives of Guilds and also held personal interviews with them.

"While these representatives appreciated the good intentions of the Council, the rice shop keepers, at a meeting held at Chia Koo Tang Guild on the 27th unanimously maintained such a firm attitude against the licensing that we found it impossible to mediate in the controversy any further.

"We firmly believe that the Council's intention is for the best interest of the community and its aim is to ascertain the correct amount or stock kept by the different shops in the Settlement. Doubtless your scheme is meant for the benefit of the rice-consuming public but we are certain that you will agree to any other plan which is more harmonious and which is in accordance with your original scheme.

"To explain the situation clearly, we may say that the rice shops in Shanghai receive their stock from the rice hongs, which in turn are replenished by the rice mills There are at present over four hundred rice shops in the International Settlement, each of which sells an average quantity of fifteen piculs per day. In view of the small business of these shops, the high rent they have to pay and the limited space they occupy, it is impossible for them to hoard any considerable quantity of rice. The fact that the retail rice dealers cannot be guilty of hoarding needs no further proof and, we believe, this is within the knowledge of the Council.

BLAME OUTSIDE DEALERS

"As to the question of price, this is regulated by the law of supply and demand. The power of regulation rests first in the hands of the merchants in the rice producing districts before coming into those in the rice hongs and it is certain that rice shops dealing in retail business as they do are unable to control the price of rice.

"While the Council's aim in licensing the rice shops is to keep a correct record of the stock, yet we wish to point out the fact that the majority of the rice hongs and mills which deal in large quantities of the cereal are not situated within the jurisdiction of the Settlement; nor are the places of hoarding located within the territory. Therefore, the police and health officers will not be able to obtain the information they seek and the new restriction will merely cause inconvenience among the shop keepers without really benefitting the rice-consuming public.

"Under the circumstances, we consider it our duty to request the Council once more to reconsider its decision—namely, abrogate their restrictions contained in the license and devise some other means whereby both the food problem and the question of public interest may be cared for at the same time.

"The method which this Chamber considers to be effective and appreciative by the public is to secure the co-operation of the rice producing districts, the rice mills and the wholesale as well as the retail rice dealers in an effort to obtain the correct statistics on rice producing, rice stocking and rice consumption.

"This Chamber believes that the results thus obtained through the co-operation of all the merchants essentially interested in the trade will be much more satisfactory than those which the Council or any other Government Bureau may be able to secure. In this way, correct records can be obtained without causing the shop keepers any inconvenience.

"Since the Council always respects the concensus of opinion of the Chinese, and holds a high regard on the importance of commerce, we hope that you will appreciate the position of the rice shops and abrogate the license in

EMPIRE HEADS ARE DIVIDED ON RENEWAL OF JAP PACT

Meighen, Canada, Only One Who Wholly Opposes It

GEN. SMUTS SHY

Hughes Thinks It Best Way Of Protecting Australia

(Reuter's Service)

London, June 30.—According to the Manchester Guardian, the conference of Imperial Prime Ministers yesterday continued its discussion of the question of the renewal of the Anglo-Japanese Alliance.

Mr. Meighen, the Canadian Prime Minister, vigorously opposed the renewal of the Alliance, contending that it would impede the possibilities of an agreement in regard to the limitation of armaments, which, he said, depended on a comprehensive conference on Pacific problems.

Mr. Hughes strongly supported the renewal and declared that the Anglo-Japanese Alliance was the best and cheapest means of protecting Australia as it provided a strong check upon Japan.

General Smuts expressed the conviction that the real foundation of Great Britain's international policy must be close co-operation with the United States and that any step which might hinder a better understanding between Great Britain and America must be most carefully examined.

It is understood that General Smuts also expressed the opinion that the results expected from the renewal of the Alliance could be secured equally well from a conference of the Powers interested in the Pacific.

Mr. Massey, Prime Minister of New Zealand, appears to have favored both a renewal of the Anglo-Japanese Alliance and a conference of the Powers interested in the Pacific.

London, July 1.—Enthusiastic speeches were delivered at a dinner at the Colonial Institute last night, when Mr. Meighen, Mr. Hughes, Sir Thomas Smartt, the Maharajah of Cutch and the Prince of Wales spoke.

The keynote of the Dominions representatives' remarks was that the tie that bound the Empire was the Crown. Mr. Meighen said he hoped that the visits of the heir apparent had now become an established convention. Sir Thomas Smartt invited the Prince of Wales to visit South Africa.

The Prince of Wales in reply appealed for closer Imperial intercourse and improvement of communications, especially of aerial communications.

LITTLE HSU GETS SETBACK IN PLAN TO REGAIN POWER

Failure To Win Support Of General Lu Proved Greatest Blow

(Asia News).

Peking, June 29.—Little Hsu, reputed to have had a hand in the Ichang and Wuchang mutinies, has received a serious setback to his plans for gaining further influence in the Yangtsze Valley, according to reports reaching some of the foreign legations.

For nearly a year the former Anfuite leader has been perfecting his organisation. He has several times sent out threats that his bands would assassinate prominent officials, create communist troubles and in general disturb the government. None of these plans has been carried out.

Many of these things were set aside when General Lu Yung-hsiang began sending his now famous telegrams regarding the self-government movement.

Little Hsu is said to have seen an opportunity for seizing popularity and several of his emissaries were sent to General Lu offering his support in the movement. General Lu, however, has refused to treat with him holding that an escaped prisoner who is hiding in a foreign concession in Shanghai could be of little service to such a program. General Lu has also said that Little Hsu is clever in some ways though a bungler in others and as the originator of the self-government movement he does not want to be overshadowed. He has accordingly refused to deal with the Anfuite group.

The noted fugitive Anfuite is now living in Shanghai though he makes frequent trips to Hangchow to confer with his confederates and others who are displeased with the policies of the Central Government. He appears to make these trips at will and is not molested though a small band of Chinese might at any time take him prisoner.

It is said that Chinese secret observors know of all of his movements and that they can gain more for the Central Government by watching and reporting than by stopping his activities. His arrest would not stop the plot for a general military movement in the Yangtsze Valley, it is said. The object now is to learn as much of this contemplated movement as possible and stop it at the proper time.

Interest in the Hangchow conferences seems to be dying out for lack of confidence in the leader, according to the foreign reports. Had General Lu joined hands with the Little Hsu group there might have been a chance for a more general disturbance in the Valley but now both self government and Anfuite popularity seem to be dying a natural death.

Rent Bill Passes First Reading In Hongkong Council

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Hongkong, July 1.—The Legislative Council has passed the first reading of a bill the main object of which is to ensure that house tenants now in occupation shall not be dispossessed for the present, so long as they comply with the terms of their tenancies. Its effect is to restrict the right of landlords to evict their tenants, subject to certain exceptions.

Broadly speaking, if the bill becomes law, a tenant will not be obliged to pay a rent higher than was payable in respect of his tenement at the end of last year. The measure applies only to private domestic tenements and not to buildings occupied since the commencement of the ordinance. The ordinance will continue in force until June 30, 1922.

Grand Opera

The "Carmen" of the Russian Grand Opera company, as given at the Lyceum last night, is the "Carmen" that we all know, yet with a difference. The story seemed to be told more fully, and its length in telling seemed to add to the interest in the singing and in the story itself.

The Lyceum was crowded at last night's production. The artistes playing the leads, with but one exception were all new to Shanghai. Miss Mashir who sang "Maguerita" in "Faust" appeared again last night as the peasant girl "Micaela." Busanovsky sang "Don Jose," Mr. Pantileef, "Escamillo," the toreador.

"Carmen" was sung by Miss Burskaya. It was her first appearance in Shanghai. Her rich mezzo-soprano, her dark Spanish type of beauty, equipped her splendidly for the part. Her portrayal of the character, and her rendition of the action was strong, even gripping in its tenseness. The final scenes especially were appealing.

Tonight's opera will be Verdi's "La Traviata."

Rice Strike Begins As Shops Stop Sales

"Yours faithfully,

"Chinese General Chamber of Commerce."

OUTSIDE SHOPS TO FOLLOW

The determination of the Frenchtown, Nantao and Chapei shop keepers to stand benind their brethren of the Settlement was re-emphasised yesterday and it was reported that the dealers in the French Concession have decided to close their doors on July 3, instead of on July 5 when the shops in Chinese territory have indicated they will cease selling.

At a meeting of the Chapei dealers one of the speakers declared that if the Settlement shops closed it would be dangerous for the Chapei tradesmen not to follow suit. After considerable discussion it was decided that the guild should co-operate with other organisations in requesting the Settlement shops to remain open and that adequate protection should be asked of the military and police. If, however, the Council should compel the dealers under its jurisdiction to take out licenses under the proposed regulations the Chapei merchants were to lend their support to their fellow dealers in the Settlement.

The Commissioner of Defense, the Shanghai Taoyin and the Shanghai City Magistrate have again appealed to the representatives of the guilds to influence the dealers not to continue the strike. They urge that further effort be made to effect a peaceable settlement.

All shops in the Louza and West Hongkew districts were closed yesterday. Some were closed in Harbin Road district and those in other districts took their shutters down yesterday morning, but informed all customers that they had no rice to sell.

TROUBLE FORESEEN

Should the strike continue, as the signs seem to indicate, it will be two or three days before the pinch of short rations comes upon the people. All who have been able to afford it have laid in supplies in advance and the food shops and restaurants have accumulated stocks to carry them on for some days. Many hongs also have purchased quantities of rice for their staffs. The coolie class will be the first hit by the stoppage of sales and it was freely predicted yesterday that unless a settlement comes within the next two days trouble will begin.

Obituary

DR. YEN TEH-CHING

(Asia News)

Peking, June 28.—Dr. Yen Teh-ching, one of the foremost engineers in the Far East, former Director General of Railroads and a brother of Dr. W. W. Yen, Minister of Foreign Affairs, is dead in Hankow. Dr. Yen died Saturday after a long illness. Dr. W. W. Yen recently visited him there.

Dr. Yen Teh-ching recently returned from America where he gave many addresses on the Chinese railroads and the transportation problems.

The early education of Dr. Yen was obtained in the Anglo-Chinese College and the French School in Shanghai. He then went to America where he took a further preparatory course and then matriculated at the University of Virginia. Completing that course he took his engineering course at Lehigh University.

Returning to China he was appointed engineer for the Hankow and Canton Railroad project. Later he became assistant engineer of the Peking-Kalgan line and still later as engineer he played a large role in the completion of that road.

After an examination before the Board of Education he obtained the degree of Doctor of Engineering.

Dr. Yen was a member of a family notable in educational circles and all of the brothers and a sister obtained foreign training. He was especially popular in America and was a member of the strongest fraternal organisations there.

Revelations In Cables From Jap Commanders To Tokio Agitate Peking

Peking, June 28.—Peking is still discussing the peculiar nature of official dispatches from a Japanese commander in Vladivostok to his superiors in Tokio, indicating that Japan found it necessary to change policies rather suddenly with regard to the Chita Government.

It would seem from these dispatches that Japan was hardly prepared for the attitude with which Semenoff was received by the Merkouloff Government and that the rebuffs to Semenoff were a source of distress.

The dispatches also tell that the American representative in Vladivostok was taking the lead in adopting an irreconcilable attitude toward Japanese policies.

Copies of the dispatches were sent by an agent whose sources of information have heretofore been especially accurate. The first one sent June 20 by General Tachibana to General Gulkhara, Tokio reads as follows:

"In view of Seo's reports in regard to the continuance of negotiations between the Merkouloff Government and Attamen Semenoff I am taking an attitude of "expectation." I have informed Seo that my attitude would change as soon as the Mongolian groupe opens general activities and shows some actual results in the underground work of some of the extreme radical parties supported by the whole personnel of the Vladivostok consuls. They are entirely ignorant of the real Russian question and are being led by the American representative who had adopted an irreconcilable attitude towards our influence in the Far East.

FUNDS SHORT

"I have commenced negotiations to counteract this movement with several men of the non-socialist groups and expect to find a peaceful way out of the present situation, which is very precarious as to the budget question for the Siberian expeditionary force."

The other dispatch which is reported as being sent by the same general to General Sudzuki in Tokio was filed on the same day but four hours later. It reads:

"From all of my reports to the Supreme Military Council you may judge whether the situation is truly abnormal, so far as our expeditionary corps is concerned. Among our own forces a group has formed which is opposed to Attaman Semenoff and is supporting the opposition in the army and among the people. Their position is strengthened by the Consular Corps whose members have adopted a hostile attitude toward Semenoff.

"The general situation now tends to force us back to an attitude of conciliation in regard to the Far Eastern Republic which annuls the plan worked out.

"The position in which we find the Mongolian army so small in numbers that it is out of all proportion to the area of the territory occupied and to the military operations on three fronts, naturally delays the solution of the Semenoff problem.

"The appropriation as assigned by the budget confirmed by the Supreme Military Council to support the Semenoff units, is exhausted. This condition I ascribe to the frequent changes made in our program and the hesitating attitude adopted by the Military Council as to putting an end to non-interference in Russian domestic affairs.

"The delay in making a decision may bring very undesirable consequences. The situation of our army demands an immediate clearing up in regard to the Russian question. Knowing your point of view in this matter, I request you to use your influence in this matter."

UNGERN DISAPPOINTS

The dispatches would indicate that the mad Baron Ungern has been a disappointment to the Japanese command. The dispatches are supposed to have been sent soon after the report that part of Ungern's force were defeated.

It may be significant that the only reports of Ungern's defeat came from Chita Government sources. The Reactionaries and the Japanese have failed to mention it and this would indicate that the efficient Japanese censorship is working and working well.

While it has been generally charged by the radical groups that Semenoff was operating on Japanese money, this is the first dispatch from sources heretofore found reliable, that show how the money was handled. If the sender speaks truly, the Japanese Military Council in making appropriations for the Siberian corps though it was making the amount large enough to cover the Semenoff operations as well.

It is also considered significant in Peking that there is apparently a division of sentiment among the men in the Japanese corps in Siberia.

(Dalta News Agency)

Harbin, June 28.—The commercial and industrial circles of Vladivostok have become bitterly opposed to the Merkuloff government, owing to the appointment of notorious manipulators to all responsible positions, resulting in an open plunder of state property and treasury in all government establishments.

The protests of merchants and manufacturers have been ignored and the majority of unscrupulous officials continue their ruinous work. The Non-Socialist Conference, where different reactionary groups are contending for supremacy, has passed all limits. Some groups openly declare their willingness to give up certain claims upon receiving a sufficient sum of money. The conference has been turned into an auction hall. Representatives of the manufacturing class have withdrawn.

Later.—The Non-Socialist Conference has closed owing to the withdrawal of delegates. Only sixty delegates are left who are supporters of Merkuloff.

Virginia School Has Commencement

(China Press Correspondence)

Huchow, June 29.—The joint commencement exercises of Virginia School and of Soochow University Middle School, Number Three were held yesterday afternoon, June 28, in the Methodist church. As the day fortunately was fine an audience of some eight hundred people crowded the building to share in the occasion. Among the visitors were the Commissioner of Military Affairs and the Civil Magistrate.

The speaker of the day was Mr. S. K. Tsao, the general secretary of the Shanghai Chinese Y.M.C.A. Mr. Tsao's able and inspiring address, delivered with vigor and eloquence, was listened to with the greatest appreciation by all present. The Military Commissioner made a short address and presented some gifts to the graduates. The Civil Magistrate also made a few remarks. The rest of the program consisted of a song by a chorus class of Virginia School, music by a Chinese orchestra of the boys' school, and a cornet solo with piano accompaniment.

Diplomas were presented to eleven boys of Middle School, Number Three, and to the three graduates of Virginia School. Certificates were given to a class of Virginia School kindergarten pupils, to the graduates of the preparatory department, ten in number, and to sixteen students in music.

FRENCH BANK FAILS

(Reuter's Service)

London, June 30.—Reports that the Banque Industrielle de Chine is in difficulties caused a drop in Peking Syndicate shares on the London Stock Exchange today. These shares subsequently rose again to twelve shillings.

Paris, June 30.—The Minister of Finance has called a meeting of the leading banks to consider the position of the Banque Industrielle de Chine.

Paris, July 1.—The Banque Industrielle de Chine has suspended payment.

The President of the Seine Commercial Tribunal has ordered an enquiry into the suspension of payment by the Banque Industrielle de Chine.

The Directors of the Bank de Paris et des Pays-Bas, interviewed by the Temps, expressed profound regret at the suspension at a moment when the Deutsche Asiatische Bank is re-opening all its branches. They declare that energy and goodwill could have saved the Bank. The Liberte affirms that the situation could have been saved if the proposal had been accepted that the Banque de France advance one hundred million francs on a guarantee of 147,000,000 in Chinese Treasury bonds.

The manager of the local branch of the Banque Industrielle de Chine said last night that he had no comment to make on the Reuter's message. He added that a statement would be ready for publication in THE CHINA PRESS tomorrow.

DON'T FEAR GERMAN FILMS

American Producers Say Their Pictures Would Not Please

Berlin, April 8.—German moving-picture films will not be serious competitors of American films in the near future, in the opinion of many American producers who have been in Germany within the last few months studying the development of the film industry.

"Neither the plays staged by Germans nor the personality of the German actors I have seen would appeal to American patrons," one of America's foremost film producers declared, after an inspection tour which included the leading studios and moving-picture theatres of Germany. "I could truthfully say the same of the British film industry. American producers are, in my opinion, far ahead of the Germans and British in the art of producing appealing films.

"In Germany many of the important films are too gruesome for the American public. Then the actresses who appear in many of the films are not young and beautiful enough to satisfy Americans."

German film makers are producing many cubist effects. Some of these films are skilfully done, but the themes are generally gloomy and not of a character which Americans demand.

TURKS HANG INDIAN SPY

Angora Court Convicted Him As A Spy—Kemal Gets Russian Loan

Angora, May 27 (Associated Press).—Mustapha Sachir, a British Indian subject, who was formerly a member of the Turkish delegation in London, was publicly hanged as a spy in Parliament Square here today, after conviction at a trial which had lasted eighteen days. He was the first individual of Allied nationality to have been so condemned in Turkey for many years.

Mustapha Sachir came to Constantinople from London and then, in January, proceeded to Angora, where he was discovered, it was alleged, to be sending letters written in invisible ink to the British. Special efforts were made to secure his release, with that of twenty-two officers and civilians now being detained at Angora, whom the Turkish Nationalists are holding despite the release of thirty Turks whom the British were holding prisoners at Malta.

A new extraordinary mission of the Russian Soviet Government has arrived at Trebizond, on the Black Sea, with Yousouf Kemal, the new Foreign Minister of the Turkish Nationalist Government, who concluded the Bolshevist-Turkish Nationalist agreement in Moscow recently, under which it was provided that the Russian Soviet Moslem troops in Transcaucasia should join the Nationalist forces.

It was announced also that the Moscow Government had supplied additional artillery for the troops of Mustapha Kemal Pasha, the Turkish Nationalist leader, and also $500,000 in gold, as a loan.

Children Cry for Fletcher's
CASTORIA

Fletcher's Castoria is particularly a preparation for Infants and Children made agreeable to the taste, acceptable to the stomach and pleasant in its action. It has been in use for over thirty years and has always been one of the most highly esteemed of all cathartic preparations. It has one great advantage over other preparations of its kind in that while it opens the organs readily and completely, it does not have a tendency to produce subsequent constipation so much to be dreaded.

It was only after years of research in the fields of herbs and roots for a combination of purely vegetable matter that would have all the virtues of Castor Oil, without its disagreeable, nauseating properties, especially when used for infants or children, that the formula used in Fletcher's Castoria was found, and which for over 30 years has proven its worth. Try it.

Save the Babies.

Infantry mortality is something frightful. We can hardly realise that of all the children born in ivilised countries, twenty-two per cent., or nearly one quarter die before they reach one year, thirty-seven per cent., or more than one-third, before they are five, and one half before they are fifteen! We do not hesitate to say that a timely use of Castoria would save many of these precious lives. Neither do we hesitate to say that many of these infantile deaths are occasioned by the use of narcotic preparations. Drops, tincturer and soothing syrups sold for children's complaints contain more or less opium or morphine. They are, in considerable quantities, deadly poisons. In any quantity, they stupefy, retard circulation and lead to congestion, sickness, death. To avoid any possibility of giving your child opiates, or narcotics of any kind, keep Fletcher's Castoria in the house, and Save the Babies.

MORE BERGDOLL PROPERTY TAKEN

Officials Seize Additional Holdings Of Slacker As Congratulations Pour In

MAY REACH MILLION TOTAL

Fugitive's Mother Complains Of 'Persecution' And Talks Of Appeal To Harding

Philadelphia, May 28.—Colonel Thomas W. Miller, Alien Property Custodian, who sized the property of Grover C. Bergdoll, fugitive slacker, yesterday, received messages of praise today from all parts of the country. Telegrams, letters and telephone calls congratulated him and offered assistance in tracking down the holdings of the Bergdoll family so that there would be no avenue through which the slacker could retain any of his own funds.

Continued search for Grover Bergdoll's holdings today raised the amount confiscated by the Government to $750,000. It is probable that the total will go above the $1,000,000 mark. Most of the collateral traced today was in mortgages held on properties in the city.

A new point that came out today is that much of the slacker's capital now loses its earning power.

Under the Trading with the Enemy act, the Alien Property Custodian has power to sell any of the real estate seized. The money will go into the Federal Treasury as does all money contained in banks.

If the property is ever returned to Bergdoll it can be only through action of Congress after the slacker has appeared personally to make his claim. Then the money will go to him out of the Treasury without interest. That in itself would be a great loss. Even at 4 percent, $40,000 a year would be lost on the property, which the Government officials expect to seize before they are done.

A treaty of peace with Germany cannot save the slacker from loss of his property. He will continue an enemy to the United States until Congress acts since his crime consists of violation of the Trading with the Enemy act.

It is thought likely that Colonel Miller will decide to dispose of as much of the Bergdoll property as possible so that it can be turned into cash. He has appointed the Fourth Street National Bank of Philadelphia as depository in the case. All tenants of Grover Bergdoll's property will hereafter make rental payments there. Persons upon whose property the slacker holds mortgages will make settlements at that bank.

Mrs. Emma C. Bergdoll, mother of the slacker, went out to Erwin Bergdoll's place on the West Chester Pike, near Broomall today, to spend the week-end. She was sadly dejected and burst into tears as she declared herself to be persecuted and added that "things couldn't be worse with that Soviet outfit in Russia."

Mrs. Bergdoll said that she intended to make a final appeal to President Harding. If she failed she said she would try to get passports to leave the country. Issuance of passports is unlikely according to officials.

Inasmuch as President Harding personally directed the seizure of the Bergdoll estate, it is doubted if he will heed any appeal. The matter was under consideration in Washington for three months.

Terrific Hailstorm In Lanhsien, Chihli

(China Press Correspondence)

Lanhsien, Chihli, June 27.—Yesterday this city was visited by the most terrible hailstorm on record. With very little warning the bombardment opened, the stones averaging the size of quail's eggs, some even larger, and continuing half an hour. All window glass on southern exposures was smashed, rooms flooded with water and hailstones. The church looked like it had been attacked by machine guns, 32 out of 40 panes of glass being demolished.

The Boys' School lost 78 panes. The ground around all tiled buildings was covered with broken fragments of tiles, whole tiles being broken out of the middle of roofs and others cracked off along the edges.

All vegetation was cut to pieces, and crops in the vicinity absolutely ruined, not only being cut up and broken down but beaten into the ground. Beans were just ready to blossom and cannot recover. What kaoliang is left may produce a little grain. Stalks of kaoliang an inch thick were cut clean off as though by bullets.

AUSTRALIANS PILE UP BIG SCORE ON WARWICKSHIRE; THIRD TEST GAME AT HAND

Parkin (Lancashire) And Hardinge (Kent) Have Been Requested To Play With England In Third Big Contest Against Visitors

(Reuter's Service)

London, June 30.—The weather was overcast and cool at Birmingham today for the second day's play in the match between the Australians and Warwickshire. Some 10,000 spectators were present, and the wicket was still in good condition.

The Australians, who had made 148 for four wickets when stumps were drawn yesterday, completed their first innings for 506, it having lasted altogether four and three-quarter hours. This rapid scoring was due to the very poor fielding of the county team, and the fact that their attack was lacking in variety, so that the bowlers became demoralised. The principal contributors were Armstrong (whose 117 was marked by good driving, and included 14 fours) and Oldfield, (who made 123, and hit 17 fours).

The Warwickshire second innings had yielded 118 for six wickets at the call of time. The game thus ended in a draw after only two days' play, the Australians desiring to have a clear day before the third test match begins at Leeds. For Warwickshire the veteran Quaife played an excellent and confident innings of 39, and N. E. Partridge, who last year played for Cambridge University, added 37. Their partnership realised 60 runs. Scores:

Warwickshire 1st. inns... 262
Australians, 1st. inns..... 506
Warwickshire, 2nd. inns.. 118 for 6 wickets.

In county championship matches concluded today, Northamptonshire beat Glamorganshire by an innings and 120; Yorkshire beat Gloucestershire by an innings and 51; Lancashire beat Worcestershire by an innings and 111; and Essex beat Hampshire by an innings and 55.

(Reuter's Service)

London, June 30.—The presence of Parkin, Lancashire, and Hardinge, Kent, has been requested at the third test match.

Blind Boxer Picks Jack Dempsey As Winner Of Fight

Through the eyes of Captain Bob Roper, the Chicago heavyweight, "Blind Jimmy" Quinn of Philadelphia, noted featherweight twenty years ago, "watched" Jack Dempsey go through his training paces at the champion's open-air arena today.

"If the observations of a blind man will do you any good, I predict that Dempsey will win within four rounds," Quinn said.

Quinn, who is 41 years old, lost his sight twenty years ago as a result of an infected eye received in a ring contest.

No Truth To The Rumor That Roughtown Mayor Slept With His Shoes On

BY 'BUGS' BAER

Sir, Sir, Sir:

You forget yourself. I am not a lady. My name is Roy Earl, from Milwaukee. I rise on my rear heels to sing the third and first stanzas from that forgotten melody, the truth. My man, Crash Towle, careened your man for a row of professional pall-bearers.

Anybody in Milwaukee will tell you that Mizzle's Station would make Roughtown look like Fairyland any day of the week and twice Sunday.

Good-bye, like Tosti,

ROY EARL,
Milwaukee.

P. S.—Pardon the ink, I couldn't find a pencil.

This Crash Towle was just a hanger on. Had an expression like a crepe. We remember him when he hung around the composing room of this paper. Every printer used to take a punch at him and leave a thumb-print on his future. He never led once in his life. Gink Fowler met him and decided to draw the color line after looking at his complection.

There was an attempt to have Gink meet Dempsey, Carpentier, Wills, Bennie Leonardfi Freddy Welsh, Jim Savage, Jim Corbett, and Strangler Lewis all in one pretty little ring.

That would have been a pip of a scramble. One for the loose-leaf ledger. But Gink refused.

He said that he never played with the neighbors' children.

Gink was a ring general of the highest disorder. Whatta man! We can see him now, as he leans gracefully against the canvas, his chin drapped up in a bundle of old home elbows. Every move was a picture. That boy was a duke. An improvement on nature.

Had a sting like a bee, but didn't have to sit down to deliver it. Had a kick like an old blind mule, but didn't have to jerk his ears when sending it over. That is the trouble with mules. Their ears telegraph their blows. Gink had his ears under control.

Nobody knew at what second one of his terrible contennial blows would flash out of the empty blue and smite all in its path. Nobody could foretell just when he would send it, how he would throw it or where it was going.

This made him more dangerous to his friends than to his enemies. But this was all official, as all his friends hated him. But his enemies loved him. That may sound like the old minnows, but it's facts and everything but facts.

Others may have claims against Gink's claim to champion's honors, but history is the bird that carves the turkey. He was one of the greatest fighters who ever looked under his pillow for advance winnings.

Anytime a riot bloomed in Roughtown, the wise guys pinned a two dollar bill on Gink. Fighting was his ticket. And he always ran ahead of his ticket. He was a good politician and knew that he who fights and takes it on the lammister will live to cut out the new Spring crop of paper dolls.

Mitchell Company Reduces Car Prices

The Mitchell Company of Racine Wis., had cut the price of their product nearly $300, which makes it the lowest priced six cylinder fine car now on the market.

President George Stowe of the New York Mitchell Motor Company, in discussing the radical slashing of prices, said: "The Racine Company apparently decided that they would keep along the movement toward prewar conditions by a final slash in prices that was of so radical a nature that it could not fail to attract the attention of the automobile buying public."

Baseball Doubleheader On Today If Field Dries

Cloudy and thunderstorms is the weather man's prediction for today's weather, which, speaking of baseball, is not very encouraging for the playing off of that series of games between the Huron and the Albany to select the best Navy team for the big game on the Fourth of July against Shanghai.

And, weather predictions are not too bright for the said big game, for the diamond at the Race Course is soaked through and through, and just a little more rain between now and Monday, and the Recreation Grounds will be closed to play, even though the sun might be on the job and the air balmy and dry on the afternoon of the Holiday.

Should baseball not be possible today or tomorrow and should the ground be fit for a game on the Fourth, it will be a difficult thing to decide whether the Huron or the Albany shall contend for the Cup game. A toss of the coin as suggested yesterday might be used to select the navy team. Or if no preliminary game or games are possible, it would not be a very bad idea for Shanghai to play both of the navy teams in a double header. The point as to which of the boats shall have its name engraved on the big silver cup may be decided by the coin.

The ground coolies yesterday afternoon were draining off the field, and it is hoped that two games may be played this afternoon, one starting at 2:15 p.m., Huron vs. Albany, and a second game Shanghai vs. the Quiros starting at 4:15 o'clock. The same program will be played on Sunday. It is possible also that the Huron and the Albany will play a Sunday morning game, should it be needed in playing the series.

ELECTRIC TRUCK HAS NEW FEATURE

Locking Differential Of New Design Developed By New York Company

For many years automotive engineers have striven to design a locking differential which would function automatically and positively. Such a differential has at last been developed and is embodied in the Walter motor trucks. Its use means infinitely higher driving efficiency in snow or under heavy road conditions; in fact, even under ideal urban conditions it reduces tire wear caused by the spinning of one wheel in travelling over cobbles or the occasional hole existing in asphalt pavements. The differential, upon which the Walter Motor Truck Company has obtained a basic patent, employs a principle commonly used in steering gears, to wit, a worm and worm gear, but the application of these units cut with proper angularity to make them irreversible, has never before been applied to a differential.

A most interesting test made with a five ton Walter truck to prove the positive action of the differential is to drive one wheel over a ten inch block while the other wheel turns in grease. This test is made with the truck either loaded or light.

Other unusual features of the Walter design are toed-in wheels, distributing the weight of the merchandise load over the four rear tires rather than on only the inside tires; a materially lighter weight chassis and far less unsuspended weight.

A full line of electric trucks are also made and a feature of great interest to the fleet owner is the interchangeability of parts. The drive on the electric unit is identical with that of the gasolene truck. Other parts such as axle bearings, springs, axles, spring hangers, etc., are absolutely alike in both types.

DEMPSEY AND CARPENTIER FIGHT TODAY AT JERSEY CITY BEFORE CROWD OF 90,000

Battle For Heavyweight Championship Of World Will Break Records; Result Should Be Known In Shanghai By 6 O'clock Tomorrow Morning

JACK Dempsey and Georges Carpentier will fight this afternoon for the heavyweight championship of the world at Jersey City before the fight biggest crowd in history, 90,000 for the largest purse ever offered for a boxing bout, and in the greatest fight stadium ever built.

The main event will probably start about 4 o'clock, which will be about 5 o'clock tomorrow morning, Shanghai time.

The whole world will be watching the flashy Frenchman's efforts against the heavier, huskier American.

In New York, Dempsey is the favorite. In Shanghai there is plenty of even betting although there is much money uncovered by Carpentier's admirers. Fans yesterday called this office and announced that they had money to bet on Dempsey. There is $3,000 here awaiting even money.

With Americans here Dempsey is the favorite but a good many Americans like the Frenchman's chances. With other nationalities Carpentier holds the edge while French residents are cheering loudest for the 172-pound wonder who has fought his way from a mediocre bantam to the heavyweight championship of Europe. Carpentier's war record and his sterling fighting ability from the time he was 13 years of age have made him popular with all nationalities.

When the two men meet at Jersey City this afternoon, they are scheduled to go 12 rounds but if either man lands a clean, hard blow in the right spot the fight should stop much sooner. Both have terrible kicks in either hand and both have a long string of knockouts to their credit.

Dempsey and Carpentier are admittedly great men to assimilate punishment. The worst that can be said against Carpentier is that Bombardier Wells and Gunboat Smith dropped him. The harshest line which could be written of the American is that he is slower than Carpentier. Georges has the edge in speed and boxing prowess. Dempsey carries the shade in all other departments.

The result of the battle should be known in Shanghai at the latest by 6 o'clock tomorrow morning.

(Reuter's Service)

New York, June 30.—The most elaborate arrangements have been made to inform the world by wireless of the result of the Dempsey-Carpentier fight. Aeroplanes will carry photographs of the fight out to sea and deliver them to steamers bound for Europe, while the steamers will be met by aeroplanes off the English coast, which will deliver the photographs to London and Paris.

The Attorney-General, Mr. Dougherty; the Under-Secretary of the Navy, Colonel Roosevelt, and the Governor of New Jersey will be among the crowd of notables who are to witness the fight, while a special train is bringing a thousand cinema celebrities from California.

Nearly Million In Rickard's Coffers

(Reuter's Service)

New York, June 30.—Receipts from tickets sold up to the present for the Dempsey-Carpentier fight amount to $800,000.

The ring will be 20 feet square instead of 18 feet as at first reported. It is estimated that there will be a record attendance of prominent people including 5,000 society women.

After a $180,000 wager had been registered in New York yesterday, the betting slumped owing to the dearth of Carpentier money.

Speed Is The Essential At Which Carpentier Has Aimed For His Condition

Believes This Advantage Will Offset Dempsey's Weight And Punch

BY RAY PEARSON

New York, June 1.—Watching Georges Carpentier in the few workouts we have been permitted to see at Manhasset forces the impression that this man from France is working for speed to dazzle Jack Dempsey when they clash at Jersey City.

Georges and his foxy manager, Francois Descamps, have established closely drawn lines to keep all intimations of their plans for battle from the public; but with the European champion weighing 173 pounds, just one pound more than the poundage he hopes to carry into the ring their methods of placing the finishing touches on Georges' condition makes it evident that speed is the thing that is being perfected.

One might believe after listening to some of the conversation around the camp, but this does not come from either Carpentier or Descamps, that the Frenchman has just as good a chance of winning the world championship by a knockout as has Jack Dempsey. But that is merely conversation that may be tossed to the winds, for the way Carpentier speeds in his workouts, poking punches at his sparring partners at long range, leads one to believe that when he starts the big fuss with Dempsey, Georges will throw in the clutch for high speed that will enable him to travel so fast that Dempsey won't be able to catch him.

Then there is another thing that is producing much argument around New York at the present time. Only a short time ago everybody was saying Carpentier was too small to compete successfully against Dempsey. But sentiment in the last few days has veered remarkably, and now it seems to be generally believed that the European champion, who really is in wonderful condition right now, has the speed to offset the advantage possessed by Dempsey in weight and in punching power. That's the peculiar twist of public opinion. It is like the wind, it blows one way and then the other.

Carpentier got back to work today after a two days' vacation and made it a strenuous day; but the eyes of the critics were not permitted to focus on Georges, because it was another of the "closed deals" at Manhasset. We have it from Gus Wilson that Georges did a lot of work and that at the conclusion he felt in fine fettle.

Not One Fifty-Dollar Seat Left On 27th Of May

New York, May 27.—Cheaper seats or none for the Dempsey-Carpentier bout will be the lot of the ring enthusiast who has delayed ordering tickets. All $50 reservations for the Jersey City battle, July 2, have been sold, Promoter Tex Rickard announced today. The box office receipts today totaled $574,264.

One thousand tickets have been sent to various points on the Pacific Coast and two blocks of 800 each have been disposed of at Los Angeles and San Francisco, Rickard declared.

TY COBB MAKING GOOD AS TIGERS' NEW MANAGER

Detroiters Convinced Veteran Will Land Team In First Division

BY SID MERCER

To the oft-repeated interrogation: "Is Ty Cobb making good as a manager?" Detroit returns an emphatic "Yes" in the form of positive declaration and firm support in the attendance at the home games.

It is too early yet to determine whether Cobb has the pitchers with which to hold the Tigers up with the leaders; in fact, Detroit doesn't believe Tyrus has a team that approaches championship calibre, but the bugs there do insist that the Georgia peach is giving his mount an intelligent ride and will whip them into the first division.

General opinion places the Indians and Yankees at the head of the procession, with either Detroit or Washington running third. With good pitching, the Tigers may crowd the leaders; without it Detroit will be satisfied if Cobb finishes fourth. They will bet you that the Tigers are not going to land in the second division.

There never has been any question as to Cobb's knowledge of baseball. He is perhaps the smartest of the individual stars of all time. When he succeeded Hughie Jennings as team leader last Winter great doubt as to his ability to govern his temperament and to inspire his players was expressed. Success or failure for Tyrus was predicted according to whether or not one believed him capable of handling men.

As a high private in the ranks Cobb carved out his brilliant career on individual lines. He was a temperamental star, reporting for Spring training when it suited his convenience and playing his own game regardless of managerial instructions at times. Beyond a doubt his system was effective, but for many years it did not tend to improve the discipline, morale or team work of the Tigers.

It's different now. Cobb is still playing his brilliant individual game, but he has subordinated it to the best interests of the team. Always a thorough workman, he is manifesting an executive ability that is reflected in the briskness of the Tiger play. He bears his responsibilities well, and like Tris Speaker is in the thick of the fray at all times coaching his men and making quick decisions in strategical emergencies.

CONSULTS WITH PLAYERS

When a pitcher wavers, Cobb comes in from center field with cheerful words calculated to allay nervousness. He holds frequent consultations with his men on the field and is constantly on the coaching lines. Through it all he has so far preserved a managerial dignity and calmness of demeanor that augurs well for his success. And he is still a wonderful batsman, fielder and base runner as he starts his seventeenth season in the American League.

"He's good enough for us," says Detroit, which had grown weary of the Jennings regime and demanded a change.

Cobb inherited a rather cumbersome team, but he is rapidly remolding it. The veteran pitchers who could not take the Tigers anywhere in the last few years are passing out. Boland, Ayres and Cunningham are through with the Tigers, and George Dauss is no longer a regular starter.

The Pacific Coast League furnished Cobb with two promising young pitchers—Holling and Sutherland, both right handers. Then there is Middleton. Stanage and Ainsmith, the veteran catchers, are being relieved often by Bassler and Woodall. Thus Cobb is gradually remodeling the Tigers. The team has batting, kick, but isn't much better than the Yankees on the bases.

Yokohama Wins 3rd Race From Kobe

Two Port Cities Are Now Tied For All-Time Honors In The Semi-Annual Sailing Contests

The crew of the Yokohama Yacht Club won the third and deciding race from the Kobe Sailing Club June 19 in the harbor at Kobe, thus winning the spring contest. Owing to the fact that Kobe won the first race on the preceding day and Yokohama the second the third race was necessary to decide the championship.

Yokohama got away about eight seconds ahead. The crew led throughout the race finishing 11½ minutes ahead of the Kobe crew.

This gives both Kobe and Yokohama four wins since the semi-annual racing meet was first started in June, 1917. A return contest will be held in Yokohama Harbor in August.

YANKEES EXPECT TO BEAT BRITISH AT HARVARD MEET

Cambridge, Mass., May 13.—The combined Harvard and Yale track teams may win a distance run for the first time against the British—Cambridge and Oxford—when the meet is held in the stadium on July 23. And the visitors, thanks to an American (Trowbridge), formerly of Princeton, may win their first high hurdles event in five meets.

There have been four meets between these combined teams, the first in 1899 being won 5 to 4 by the Britons, and they won the last in 1911 by the same count and both on their own shores. The Americans won the second meet in New York in 1901 and then again in London three years later by the scores of 6 to 3.

Only first places count in these international affrays. Cambridge has shown strongest throughout, having won thirteen firsts of a possible thirty-six. Harvard and Yale have split even, with ten each. Oxford has won only three firsts.

The Americans have never won the mile, two mile, or the three mile, which was run only in the first meet. Their British rivals seem strongest where a test of running endurance is called for. On the other hand the 120-yard high hurdles have never been captured by a Briton.

The half mile has gone to Cambridge three times, Harvard managing, however, to prevent a clean sweep by breaking in 1911. The Americans' strength has shown itself in field events, the Englishmen winning only two first out of nine in the broad and high jumps and hammer throw.

Tommie Campbell and Capt. Dennie O'Connell have an opportunity to wrest away the Oxford-Cambridge supremacy in the mile. Campbell will also make a bid in the half mile. There doesn't seem to be any American who can win from Capt. Budd of Oxford in the 440, but Montague, his team mate will find lots of tough opposition against O'Connell and Campbell.

Ned Gourdin of Harvard looks good enough to take the hundred and running broad jump. Jim Tolbert of Harvard is a strong shot putter and John Acosta of Yale and Blake Brown of Harvard are hammer throwers who will give the British lots of trouble.

Nine events as a rule have formed the program for the previous meets. England is entering a shot putter, Reese, of the University of Nebraska, a Rhodes scholar, so it appears that a ten-event schedule will be arranged this season.

The negotiations for the meet were conducted in America by Fred W. Moore, Harvard's graduate manager, and on the other side by Beryl Rudd, the Oxford captain.

The Oxford athletes who are going to make the trip in July are: Reese, shot putter; Trowbridge, hurdler and broad jumper; Rudd, sprints; Montague, distance runs; Milligan, intermediate runs; Masonokes, hammer throw, and I. Ingraham, broad jump.

Brilliant Ceremony Held For Opening Of Chinese Cotton Goods Exchange

Mr. H.Y. Moh, Chairman Of Board Of Directors, Emphasises Importance Of Cotton Trade and Urges Effective Organisation For Development Of Trade In China

The Chinese cotton goods exchange was inaugurated yesterday at its spacious offices, 21 Avenue Edward VII. A crowd of 5,000 thronged the halls of the exchange to attend the opening ceremony conducted under the direction of Mr. H. Y. Moh, cotton magnate who is chairman of the board of directors of the new enterprise.

Among the principal speakers were Mr. Zee Ping-we and Mr. Koo Chi-pan, directors and Shih Huan-shen, representing the guests. Numerous congratulatory messages were received. Representatives of the local officials, the banks and industrial concerns were among the guests.

Active co-operation with the exchanges in foreign lands for the protection and development of the cotton trade in China was the keynote of Mr. Moh's speech. He said in part:

THE ADDRESS

"The facilities in communications in the form of telegraphy, railroads and airplanes have reduced the space and distance of the world. As humanity grows and progresses, demands for supply will increase and industries will develop proportionately.

"The responsibilities of the business man at the same time become greater. He must be cautious and informed if he is to have a place in this modern world of commercial competition.

"Let me refer you to the Customs reports for the year 1920. Imports were valued at Haikwan Taels 762,200,000 while the value for exports amounted to Haikwan Taels 541,600,000 showing a balance of Taels 220,600,000. For the same year, imported cotton yarns and other cotton goods totalled Tls. 246,780,000, which is about one third of the total value of imported goods to China.

"China need not face any deficit in international trade if she is only able to improve her cotton trade alone and supply the demands of her people. Since she is a cotton producing country, there is absolutely no reason why she should not.

"Prompted by the call for effective organisation for the development of the trade, we have united all the cotton mills in China which are registered with the Ministry of Agriculture and Commerce with the exception of those in Tientsin, which are organising an exchange themselves, together with the leading merchants in the cotton and cotton goods trade for this exchange.

WILL CO-OPERATE

"We propose to co-operate with similar exchanges in Europe and America as well as Japan for intellectual intercourse and to serve the public with our united efforts and experience. With this co-operation, our business men need not work blindly and suffer unnecessarily.

"This exchange, therefore, has two aims: one is to develop the cotton trade in China and the other to protect the interest of the men in the trade. We shall invite suggestions from the public as we go on at the same time attempt to minimise speculation and keep strictly within the law in the pursuit of our business."

After the delivery of the other speeches, the guests were taken to Cafe Parisien where a reception was held.

The exchange is capitalised at $3,000,000 and is administered by a board of 15 directors, three auditors and four departments general affairs, business, accounting and treasury. One hundred and twenty brokers are members of the exchange. One hundred of these deal in yarns while the remainder in cotton piece goods. Business will be conducted beginning on Tuesday.

The speech of Mr. Zee Ping-we is as follows:

Gentlemen.—We, the members of the Chinese Cotton Goods Exchange, Ltd., are highly honored today by the presence of so distinguished and representative a body of guests at the inauguration of our exchange. Please accept our heartfelt thanks for the honor you have conferred upon us.

By way of supplementing what Mr. Y. H. Moh has just said about the trend of world events and about the importance of the role which the exchange has to play in promoting industries, especially the cotton industry, of our country, it may perhaps be permissible for me to add a few remarks. I lay no claim to mature experience in the activities of modern exchanges but it behooves me to just say a few words to explain the functions which the exchange will discharge.

OUTLINES AIMS

At the outset I wish to assure you that the operations of the exchange will be so conducted as to be beneficial to those who come into contact with it, whether they be buyers or sellers.

Its primary duties are to ensure the free circulation of goods and to effect the standardisation of prices. By means of judicious classification of standards, it affords the producer facilities for the marketing of his products at reasonable prices even when the prospects of the market are not encouraging. In this way a barrier is erected against financial panic arising from the stagnation of the market. Again a producer is often discouraged by the uncertainty of disposing of his goods in the absence of customers who are prepared to place advance orders. But when he has an exchange to which he can turn over his goods, he will be relieved of such anxieties and he can go on producing and buying raw materials at attractive prices when advantageous occasions arise.

Now as to the services which this exchange will render to the public, we shall be able, by means of regulating the value of the different classes of cotton goods, to do away entirely with the cumbersome process which buyers and sellers in this country are too apt to undergo, of haggling over the price of the commodity which they have to buy and to sell, and it is not until a considerable loss of time has been sustained deals can be consummated.

A cotton dealer may be quite alert to the trend of the market but he has to let opportunities escape before his eyes for lack of funds. Now when circumstances justify us in so doing, this exchange will be ready to accept and execute advance orders, thus fostering initiative and farsightedness and promoting productiveness in our country.

We, as representatives of the Chinese Cotton Goods Exchange, Ltd. venture to believe that both the trend of world events and the important developments that have taken place in the industrial and financial worlds of China fully justify its raison d'etre. Mr. Y. H. Moh, who has done much in organisation work and who has before him an active program, could not, after all, expect to accomplish much unless you, gentlemen, will be good enough to confer on our new enterprise the favors of your esteemed guidance and cooperation at all times and we are confident that we shall not look in vain for this measure of support.

Stone Theater Ticket Present To Harding

Dr. Constas Gives President Grecian Relic Believed To Be 2,000 Years Old

Washington, May 28.—A theater ticket not made of paper but of a stony substance that has stood the test of 2000 years has been presented to President Harding by Dr. John Constas, assistant surgeon at Georgetown University Hospital, who has just suggested to the President the appointment of a number of foreign-born citizens to some Government posts as an additional means of advancing the Administration's Americanisation policy.

Dr. Constas stated that the theater ticket was probably used during the earliest period of Grecian drama. It bears on one side the engraved head of a Gorgon and on the reverse the head of a fox. It is believed to be of Athenian origin. Dr. Constas also presented to the President for Mrs. Harding a leaden impost of the Byzantine period, consisting of a madonna and child.

Dr. Constas suggested to the President that there were many well equipped foreign-born citizens of the United States who could fill the posts in question with credit. It would convince them, he said, that there is a great future for them as citizens and that their foreign birth would in no wise hamper their chances of advancement and the fulfillment of their ambitions. Dr. Constas, who came to the United States from Greece twenty-five years ago, offered his services in any Administration effort at Americanisation.

CITRIC ACID GOING UP

How Ingredient Of Artificial Fruit Juices Is Prepared

Citric acid, used chiefly as an ingredient for artificial fruit beverages, is prepared from the juice of three species of citrus fruits—lemon, bergamot and lime. Lemons are the principal source, however.

Concentrated lemon juice comes chiefly from Sicily, bergamot juice from Messina, and lime juice from Montserrat and Dominica. Besides forming an important ingredient of artificial fruit beverages, citric acid is used for the manufacture of citrates for medicine, in making effervescent health salts and in dyeing and in calico printing. The concentrated fruit juices, which are brown syrupy liquids, are used by some calico printers in place of the solid citric acid.

The process of manufacturing citric acid from lemon juice, as described in a recent English trade bulletin, calls for the mixing of a quantity of chalk and water, the mixture being heated in a wooden vat provided with an agitator. The lemon juice is run into the chalk mixture. The calcium citrate formed is separated, washed with hot water, made into a cream with water, and treated with diluted sulphuric acid to regenerate free citric acid, which remain in solution. The solution is filtered, concentrated and allowed to crystallise. Pure citric acid is a white crystalline solid. It is predicted that the price of citric acid will increase in the course of the present season.

STINNES'S VAST INTERESTS

Itlian Fiat and Austria's Only Steel Plant Acquired

The Frangfurter Zeitung, in announcing on April 24 that Herr Hugo Stinnes, who had already absorbed so many wealth-producing properties in Germany, had acquired a controlling interest in the Alpine Montan-Alstien-Geselischaft, the only iron and steel works in Austria, and in the Italian Fiat Corporation, asserts that he made the acquisitions without material aid from any bank, thus showing how vast is the capital at his disposition.

The Vorwarts of the same date gives the following list, which it acknowledges is necessarily incomplete, of Herr Stinnes's possessions:

Coal Mines—Nine Stinnes pits, five pits belonging to the Bochum Union for mining and steel works, fourteen pits of the German-Luxemburg Mines Company and nineteen pits of the Gelsenkirchen Mines Company.

Iron Ore Mines—Seven at Buckeburg, Neukirchen, Niederhovels, Laer and Eiserfield.

Iron and Steel Works—Friedrich Wilhelm Works, Dortmund Iron and Steel Works, Rote Erde at Dortmund, Meggen Rolling Mills, Haspe Steel Works, Schliep chain factory, North Sea Works at Emden and the Weber Works at Bradenburg.

Bochum Steel Foundry, Bochum Company for Steel Industry.

The Vulcan, Duisburg and Flenburg Works, Disseldorf, Tube Works, Tiled Tube Works, Huften Tin Plate Works, Gelsenkirchen Blast Furnaces, Ratibor Steel Works, Bohler Steel Works, Dusseldorf and Gelsenkirchen Iron Foundry.

Konigsberg Cellulose Factory, North German Cellulose Factory, Konigsberg; Hugo Stinnes Paper Factory, Berlin.

The North German Publishing Company, which owns, among other properties, the formerly semi-official Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung, the Buxenstein Printing and Lithographic Works, Berlin; Industrie und Handels Zeitung, Berlin, and Wirtschaftliche Nachrichten from the Ruhr district, published at Essen.

The Schuckert Electrical Works, Nurnberg; the Siemens-Shuckert Electrical Works, Berlin; the Rhenish Westphalian Electricity Company, Essen, and works at Osnabruck for generating eletrical energy.

The Loeb Automobile Works, Charlottenburg, and the German Motor Lorry Works at Ratingen.

The Hugo Stinnes Company for Shipping and Overseas Trade, Hamburg; the Hugo Stinnes Coaling Station, Hamburg; the Neuhof Wharf, Hamburg; the Hamburg Traffic Company, the Universal Food Import Company, Hamburg; and, furthermore, Vorwarts adds, a large number of boat and barge building companies in the interior of the country, as well as a large number of provincial newspapers.

SEEK MORE LIGHT ON BACON CIPHER

Scholars Ransack Czecho-Slovakian Archives Plundered In Henry VIII.'s Time

INDIANS SAW TELESCOPE

Brought To America 23 Years Before Galileo Knew Instrument Existed

New York, May 29.—Further research work on the cipher manuscript written in the thirteenth century by Roger Bacon and discovered in 1910 by Wilfred M. de Voynich has been started among the archives of the Czechoslovakian Government at Prague, where the old volume made a long stay during the time of the Holy Roman Empire, and among manuscripts plundered by the Northumberland family from monasteries during the reign of Henry VIII.

Although not more than 600 words of the cipher manuscript, which is thought to contain between 800,000 and 1,000,000 words, have been so far deciphered, the history of the manuscript has been fairly well pieced together from about 1547 to 1680.

One big event in the history of the interesting manuscript was probably its seizure during the pillage of the religious houses under Henry VIII, in about 1538. Mr. de Voynich has found indications that the volume now at the University of Pennsylvania became an item in the great harvest of spoils gathered by John Dudley, Duke of Northumberland, from the monasteries. Hundreds of manuscripts belonging to Northumberland's booty are now being traced by scholars on both sides of the Atlantic for further light on Bacon, his pupils and his famous cipher manuscript.

The "dark ages" of the manuscript end about 1547, when the manuscript is pretty well established to have come into the hands of John Dee, then about 18 years old and a protege of the Northumberland family.

INDIANS SAW TELESCOPE

One queer by-product of the study of Dee and his circle is the discovery that American Indians in North Carolina apparently saw the sun, moon and stars through a Roger Bacon telescope at least twenty-three years before Galileo and other scientists of the early seventeenth century knew that such an instrument existed.

The Indians probably looked through a telescope made in the middle of the sixteenth century with the help of a Bacon volume now lost or destroyed. This may have been a translation by one of Bacon's pupils of the six codes of cipher which overlay the text of the manuscript at the University of Pennsylvania, or it may have been a separate work of the friar explaining in plain words some of his experiments and inventions.

From some Bacon volume, at any rate, secrets were obtained by a group of Elizabethan Englishmen who are associated with the colorful personality of John Dee, half scholar and half charlatan who was the original of Prospero, according to some commentators on Shakespeare. This group left some written traces of Bacon's secrets, but did not attempt to popularise them. They apparently hoarded the secrets rather carefully, perhaps from a spirit of monopoly, but more probably because it was the beginning of the period when some millions of women and men were burned as witches and wizards. It was at that time safe to let an Indian see heavenly bodies enlarged by lenses, when it might have been a fatal mistake to let a superstitious European know that one of his neighbors possessed an engine which would show spots on the sun and mountains on the moon.

REVEALED BY HARRIOT

Thomas Harriot was the member of the Dee group who introduced the telescope to the Indians on this continent before it was known to the learned of Europe. He was a tutor to Sir Walter Raleigh and later the geographer of Sir Walter's second expedition to America. His reference to the wonders he showed the Indians is well known, but lately a large accumulation of evidence has pretty well established that it was a genuine telescope and that it was constructed according to the specifications of Roger Bacon.

Harriot is the author of "A brief and true report of the new found land of Virginia," which is dedicated to Sir Walter Raleigh, "whose reputation has ever gone on increasing like the use of his tobacco, and whose enemies, all that be goode of them, like his new vegetable, the potato, do lie under ground." His report was afterward reprinted among Hakluyt's Voyages, telling how they awed and dazzled the Indians. Harriot wrote:

"Most things they saw with us as mathematical instruments, sea compasses, a virtue of the lodestone in drawing iron; a prospective glass whereby they showed many strange sights, burning glasses, wilde-fire workers, gunnes, bookes, writing and reading, spring clocks that seem to go of themselves and many other things."

This was in 1585. History had until recently fixed the date as 1608 and left the glory of the discovery in dispute among three Dutch spectacle-makers.

Harriot's mention of the "perspective glass" has been read thousands of times without being identified as the telescope, but much material has since come to light to prove that it was. For one thing, a manuscript of Harriot (who occupies a respectable space in encyclopedias and biographical dictionaries as a mathematician) was discovered long after his death, showing that he had studied sun spots at least as early as Galileo had seen them.

Further than that, Harriot is closely connected with Thomas Digges, who wrote in 1579 that his father Leonard could see distinct objects by means of "perspective glasses set at due angles," and that he was enabled to do this through an old book of Roger Bacon. Leonard, in a work on artillery of a still earlier date, mentions the telescope and says that he had written a volume on it, but no traces have since been found of his volume.

DEE'S KNOWLEDGE OF BACON

Dee, who was a favorite of Queen Elizabeth, was not a genius or a man of great creative ability, according to Mr. de Voynich. Proofs are not forthcoming so far to establish that as a youth he acquired these secrets from some Bacon manuscript, but the circumstantial evidence is very strong.

Dee seems to have been silent about Bacon for the most part in England, probably because his own sufferings from the reputation of being a necromancer showed him the unwisdom of linking his name up with that of Bacon, whose reputation with the common people of England was that of the greatest of all necromancers. But on the Continent it was different. There Dee performed a service for Bacon almost like that which Boswell did for Dr. Johnson. Bacon manuscripts presented by Dee to scientists and dignitaries of Europe are still coming to light. Several non-cipher Bacon manuscripts have been discovered and printed in the last few years. The cipher manuscript, according to strong evidence discovered by Mr. de Voynich, was presented by Dee to the Emperor Rudolph of the Holy Roman Empire in 1584 or 1588, after which a century of continental scholars sought in vain to decide it.

Another by-product of this research is the increasing probability that Sir Francis Bacon wrote his great philosophical works under the influence of the great bearer of his name in the thirteenth century. The fact that John Dee met young Francis was first pointed out and discussed as a fact of historical importance a few years ago by Mary Trueblood of Mount Holyoke College. It is proved from the diary of Dee that on August 11, 1582, Francis Bacon, then 21 years old, called on him at his library at Mortlake. In the following year, Dee began his work on the Instauration of Philosophy. The family likeness of the philosophy of the two Bacons, in spite of the intervening three and a half centuries, and their constant insistence on learning by experiment only and rejecting authority, has frequently been remarked by scholars, but has never been thoroughly investigated.

VOYNICH GETS MORE CLUES

Mr. de Voynich has recently received clues which may uncover much more facts of importance regarding Dee. In telling of the further work which he had cut out for himself, Mr. de Voynich said:

"My next step will be to trace the place or person from whom Dee obtained his Bacon MSS. Material already gathered points in the direction of the Northumberland family. Through Dee's whole life he is apparently under the patronage of both branches of that family, the Dudleys and the Percys.

"Further researches into the history of John Dudley, Duke of Northumberland, and his family may lead to amazing and important discoveries. It may help to locate the original repository or repositories of Dee's Bacon manuscript. It may also disclose the names of Bacon's immediate pupils and those who in the two following centuries studied him and copied his works. In this way it ought to be possible to trace the hidden influence of Bacon's philosophy, Bacon's scientific discoveries and perhaps even Bacon's secrets on the great minds of the Rennaissance."

So far, only between 500 and 600 words of the cipher manuscript have been translated by Dr. William Romaine Newbold. The difficulties of reading the minute Greek shorthand in which it is written and following it through five additional ciphers, when the manuscript is so old, has made progress very slow.

How "WANTS" Germinate, and Become....WANT ADS!

In the picture you see FOUR MEN. There are THOUSANDS more like them in Shanghai!

One is about to leave town, and wishes to sell his CAR—another is in the market for a HOME—still another is looking for a buyer for his BUSINESS, or wishes to secure a suitable location for a STORE—the fourth man LOST HIS WATCH, and is thinking out a SCHEME for GETTING it BACK.

The shining path to each objective is the CLASSIFIED columns of THE CHINA PRESS. Every ordinary need, and many that are out-of-the-ordinary, are promptly filled through these columns and at trifling expense!

Frank Hodges Describes Strike Of The Miners

BY FRANK HODGES

Chief spokesman for the Miners' Federation, who has been representing the British coal miners in their great strike against drastic wage reductions

(Coal is the lifeblood of British trade and prosperity. The coal strike is said to have cost Great Britain more daily than the war. The situation is not adequately understood out here and herewith the miners' spokesman presents their case in a way in which the issue can be comprehended:)

The facts with regard to the causes of the stoppage in the British mining industry are beyond dispute.

The coal mines were, by act of Parliament, subject to Government control until August 31. I submit that nobody ever supposed for a moment that control would be withdrawn before that date.

Suddenly, however, the Government made up its mind to de-control the industry on March 31, and proceeded to carry its intentions into effect by new legislation.

That was the first factor in the development of the crisis. The Government, finding that its bargain was temporarily resulting in a financial loss to the State, decided in its own interest to make a new bargain which would rid it of financial obligations.

In the meantime, the Miners' Federation and the mine owners were in negotiation on the general question of a permament wages scheme.

The Government's new policy of abandoning the mining industry cut athwart these negotiations. The mine owners had immediately to consider their position. The Government's control was withdrawn. The industry was flung back to the individualistic organisation of 1914, under which the level of wages was in effect determined by what the worst mines could pay.

The existing rates of wages could not be paid by certain individual mine owners. The whole body of owners, therefore, posted notices of dismissal and offered the workers re-engagement on new terms.

MEANT ABJECT POVERTY

Those terms, as I shall presently show, were grossly inadequate to maintain even a very modest standard of life. They would, in fact, have plunged hundreds of thousands of mine workers and their dependents into abject poverty. That was the second factor in the development of the crisis.

The public must be quite clear on these two points: The Government and the owners precipitated the crisis—the former by its sudden and unexpected withdrawal of control; the latter by the dismissal of the miners and the proposed new wage rates.

The Miners' Federation had no alternative but to resist with all the power it possessed. We were called upon to defend the very foundations of the Miners' Federation and to protect the million and a quarter miners and their families.

What did the mine owners offer? It would need more than the space at my disposal to set out the long and complicated list of wage rates offered for all the different grades of workers in all the different coal fields.

AMAZINGLY LOW PAY

I may, however, submit to the readers some examples, which I summarise in the following table showing the rates of wages certain grades of workers would receive if they accepted the offer of the owners, the amounts and percentage of the reductions and the value of the wages offered, expressed in terms of purchasing power in 1914.

I do this in order to show exactly what the proposed reductions really mean to the miners and their families.

Here are the figures:

(The figures of proposed wages are given, approximately, at present exchange rates. The 1914 equivalent is given, approximately, at 1914 exchange rates, which were at par.)

	Proposed Wage per Week.	Reduction PC.	1914 equiv't

Now, with these figures in their minds, I wish my readers to consider the miners' case. The first point which I wish to emphasise, and to which I have already drawn attention, is the very drastic nature of the reductions.

I ask any man—any employer—whether wholesale cuts such as have been suggested are justifiable.

I ask, also, whether the workers in a vital industry, performing service of the highest social value, under conditions which are often distasteful and always dangerous, ought—even in a time of trade depression—to be asked to accept such wages.

I ask whether any industry and any community has a moral right to deny a living wage to the men on whose labor industry and commerce depend.

But there is a second point to which I must draw attention—one to which the miners attach equal importance. The wages in the various coalfields have grown as a result of many complex factors. The miners have striven toward the ideal of "equal pay for equal work." Justice demands that men doing the same kind of work should receive remuneration on the same scale.

I do not think that the ideal is one which can be realised at the present time; what we do desire is that the disparities which exist between wages of the same grades and types of workers in the different coalfields should not be increased.

INJUSTICE GROWS WORSE

It will be observed that the reductions proposed vary for the same classes of workers in different coalfields and for different classes of workers in the same coalfield.

The old confusion is worse confounded, and to injustice is added further injustice. The whole trend of Trade Union policy and action is toward national wage rates and national agreements, and though "equal pay for equal work" may for a hundred reasons be difficult of attainment and impracticable for the moment, every thinking person will agree that it is a worthy end to follow.

Any wages proposals which actually increase the differences in the rates of wages of workers doing the same job are open to the strongest objection.

I am sure I have carried my readers so far with me. They will agree that the mine-owners' proposals are scandalous on two grounds—they make indefensible reductions and they create further injustices. The Miners' Federation has its own proposals, and to these I wish now to turn.

"A SCRAP OF PAPER"

On the immediate question the miners ask for a continuance of Government aid. It is immoral for the Government to treat an Act of Parliament as a "scrap of paper" because circumstances have changed so that the British Government is temporarily involved in a financial loss.

The Government has profited from the prosperity of the coal industry, and it is right that it should stand by it during its period of adversity.

It is obvious that during a time when the industry is not paying its way somebody must subsidise it. It may be the mine-owners; it may be the State—or it may be the miners.

The original suggestion was that the miners should subsidise the industry by accepting substantially lower wages. The British Government, however, is now prepared to give temporary financial assistance, but for a very limited period—a period too short to be of real value.

But this does not settle the real difficulties of the situation. We have become accustomed in the mining industry to national negotiations and national agreements. We intend to continue this policy. We are determined that advances should be national and that reductions should be national.

ON A NATIONAL SCALE

If the prosperity of the industry warrants increased wages, then all should profit in equal proportion. If the economic circumstances of the industry necessitate reductions, then reductions should be made on all.

We are not seeking to achieve "equal pay for equal work" by this means. But we are seeking in any new arrangements to have advances and reductions determined on a national basis. This is one reason why we stand firm for national negotiations.

There is a further reason. The miners have developed a national point of view and a sense of national solidarity. The point of view of the mine owners, unfortunately, is more circumscribed. It is bounded by the district—or even the undertaking—in which they are interested.

The miners in one district cannot stand by and see their fellow-workers in another district seriously affected because they have the misfortune to work in an area where the coal seams are less valuable and less easily worked.

Mr. Lloyd George the other day said that "You have thick seams on one area somewhere near the surface. In other areas you have thin seams very much lower down; therefore, you have natural varieties. Providence is responsible, and we have to adapt ourselves to its ways, whether we like it or not. . . . This is something which I dare not criticise, otherwise I may get into a region of blasphemy."

I venture to suggest that it is blasphemy even to hint that Providence intended that hewers of coal and their fellow-workers should necessarily suffer because by the accident of birth or location they are employed in a mine suffering from certain geological disadvantages.

It is repugnant to the miners' sense of justice that some men should profit and others be penalised because of natural conditions. The Miners' Federation has deliberately adopted a national policy because of the inherent injustice of district wages agreements.

It will be clear, I think, to all unprejudiced people that in the interests of the mine-workers—and, I would submit, in the interest of the community as a whole—the Miners' Federation is fully justified in refusing to relinquish national negotiations as an essential plank in its program.

But by national negotiations I do not mean national negotiations of district wages agreements based upon the capacity and circumstances of the worst mine in a district.

"HEART OF THE PROBLEM"

The Prime Minister has accepted a national wages board and national negotiations, but he had said that wages would be "decided by the capacity of the mines in the locality," though the actual "fixation" of the wages would be a "national responsibility."

National negotiations on these terms would be of next to no value at all. The miners wish to secure an equality of treatment as regards both advances and reductions for mine workers—wherever they are employed.

National negotiations, in my judgment, are demanded on grounds of justice. But a national wages board in itself would not secure the end we have in view. Clearly, if a district is at a given time unable to pay wages nationally agreed upon, it must receive assistance of some kind. Here we come to the real heart of the problem.

The British Government has accepted the principle of temporary State assistance; it has accepted the principle of a National Wage Board, but neither the Government nor the mine owners will accept the vital principle of a national fund or "pool," without which a National Wage Board would become practically inoperative.

I ask the reader's careful attention to this aspect of the subject, as it is fundamental. A good deal of ink has been spilt in the Press on this subject, for the most part by people who do not appear to have taken the trouble to understand our proposals. We have never suggested anything in the nature of a "pool" of profits.

LEVY ON THE COAL

What we propose, in brief, is the establishment of a national fund for the purpose of enabling districts which would not otherwise be able to do so to pay during a given quarter the rate of wages agreed upon by the National Board.

The fund would be obtained by a levy (of an amount fixed by the Board) on each ton of coal raised in the country. This levy would rank as one of the costs of production. It would, therefore, diminish the surplus left for distribution as wages and profits.

If the aggregate wages paid are ten times the aggregate profits, it is obvious that Labor's contribution to the fund is ten times as large as that of the employers.

A tonnage levy of the kind suggested seems a simple enough proposition. It is not a new device. The principle has been adopted by combinations of one kind and another. There are many business men in England at the present time who know from experience that the proposal is practicable.

It is practicable in the mining industry. But the mine-owners have set their faces against it. The Government urges that, as a consequence, it could only be carried into effect by legislation and State control.

I suggest that the mine-owners cannot adduce adequate reasons for rejecting the proposal of a national "pool." If I had space at my command, I believe I could convince my readers that the effect of the national "pool" would be to increase, and not to diminish, the efficiency of the coal industry.

NOT PUBLIC OWNERSHIP

In conclusion, I must refer to the charges which have been made that the miners are simply endeavoring to secure nationalisation (public ownership) by the back door. To these charges I give an unqualified denial. I cannot do better than quote the words used by Herbert Smith, acting president of the Miners' Federation, at one of our conferences with the mine-owners and the Government:

"I want to say here, without any question, that I am not prepared to call a miners' strike to force nationalisation. That is a question for the country, and it must be settled through the ballot-box of the country. That is also the view of my executive."

I think it is obvious that, with the very bread and butter of our wives and children at stake, we have little time to consider so large a political issue as nationalisation. The charge of political motive is made, I am convinced, in order to distract public opinion from the main problem to a bogus issue.

The miners are now suffering for one object alone—fair economic treatment. Their sufferings today are in a very real sense borne for the whole working class, whose standard of life, already imperilled, will almost inevitably be severely reduced unless the public support the miners in their just demands.

JAPS PLAN PIECE GOODS EXCHANGE

Chinese piece goods merchants were very much disturbed yesterday by the report being circulated in Shanghai that a Sino-Japanese piece goods exchange is being organised by Japanese and Chinese promoters.

The Chinese piece goods dealers at a recent gathering emphatically denounced the organisation of the exchange, which they said would be detrimental to their already much depressed trade. Reports say that seven Japanese piece goods merchants in Shanghai and three Chinese, one of whom is said to be a compradore of a big Japanese firm, are interested in the project.

The proposed exchange will attempt to oust the Chinese as well as European and American piece goods and replenish the market with goods from Japan, according to those objecting.

Cotton

Messrs. J. Spunt and Company write as follows in their cotton market report of today.

China Cotton.—Our market during the past week has shown no marked changes in prices and rates remain steady at the close. While the Mills are keeping aloof as far as the local product is concerned they are devoting more attention to Mid-Americans which being superior in every respect to that of the local product is now obtainable at about the same prices as are now current on the native staple. However the continued steadiness prevalent in the local market may be attributed to the extensive speculative buying on the part of outsiders who look forward to a realisation of handsome profits on their investments in that the weather conditions both here and in India for the new Season Crop are anything but favorable. Tone of the market, Steady.

NEW BANK OPENING

The Bank of China and South Seas will open for business on Tuesday. A reception will be held at its building, corner of Hankow and Szechuen Roads, between the office hours.

NEW SILK EXCHANGE

A second silk exchange was inaugurated at the Chinese Chamber of Commerce yesterday. The shareholders elected Shen Lienfang, chairman of the Kiangsu, Chekiang and Anhui Silk and Cocoon Guild, its first chairman and Wang Tsing-chen and Shen Chu-cheng, vice-chairmen.

The first silk exchange was promoted by Dr. C. T. Wang and a number of others. Legal representations will probably be made in view of the regulations of the Ministry of Agriculture and Commerce to allow only one exchange for one trade in any city.

Anglo-Japanese Alliance Held Up

THE Reuter cable bringing word that it has once more been found impossible to renew the Anglo-Japanese Alliance will be hailed with genuine pleasure not only throughout America and Canada but in the Far East where Britons conversant with the manner and effect of its operations have been consistently opposing any renewal of it.

That London sees a political value in its continuance goes without saying for London has made an admirable fight not only to gulp down the unsavory dose itself but to assist the dominions in doing the same thing. The premiers of Australia, New Zealand and South Africa gagged a good bit but towards the end, evidently when they had heard a good deal of protest from their constituencies, decided not to go all the way. They are now planning to return to their respective countries with the object of consulting public opinion before finally committing themselves. Even a referendum on the matter is now considered advisable and this would be a most praiseworthy move.

It is evident now that Premier Meighen of Canada was the main and strongest opponent of the renewal program. He stood staunchly against it throughout the conference. He of course realised more clearly than any other important figure at this great conference, what the effect of renewal would be in the United States and Canada, for the interests of those two countries are practically identical so far as this alliance is concerned and the relationship between Great Britain and Japan is more vital to them than to the others.

America will be grateful for this firm stand by the Canadian premier to a far greater extent than is likely to be understood out here. As is well-known there is along the whole three thousand miles of border between these two countries not one fort, not even a single gun and there are no two peoples in the world who know and appreciate each other so well as these two do. In social intercourse and sport there is the same lack of formality or ceremony as one finds between people of one nation, while their vast interlocking trade and commercial interests link them together in indissoluble bonds of friendship.

What we are trying to say is that what is best for the United States is best for Canada, and we think we may carry this a bit further by saying that what is best for the United States also is best for Great Britain and the whole British Empire. We can see no gain for Great Britain, political or otherwise, in the renewal of this alliance. We can see a distinct gain for Great Britain and the United States emanating from its rejection, not only for those two, but for civilisation as a whole.

Will the Captain be allowed to put in some port?
Will it be allowed to name children Tom and Jerry?

Nearly all of June the weather man has left us almost in doubt as to whether there are any stars, which reminds us of a story told about Queen Victoria. When a prominent Parsee gentleman from Bombay visited London and for several weeks found the city enveloped in the dense fog for which the place is noted. he was introduced one day to the queen, who remarked to him: "I have heard that your people worship the sun." His reply was: "And so would your Majesty, could you but see Him!" But we may be assured that better days are in store for us this month, and the warm evenings will tempt us out of doors, where we shall see many wonders in the heavens.

VENUS A MORNING STAR

The splendor of Venus in the morning until sunrise will be worth getting up early for. She is just now at her greatest elongation west of the sun, and will be half way up to the zenith at sunrise. Venus will remain a morning star all the rest of the year, approaching nearer and nearer to the sun, and receding farther from the earth all the time, until she passes directly behind the sun next February.

Since Venus' path around the sun lies within the earth's path, and her distance from the sun is less than three-fourths that of the earth, she travels around the sun much faster than we do; and so it happens that she is sometimes between us and the sun, and sometimes on the other side of the sun. In this race around the oval there is never the slightest variance from year to year, and the amount that Venus gets ahead of the earth can always be predicted to the second. The difference in the apparent size of her disk is considerable for her various positions. When she was between us and the sun on April 22nd last she presented a face thirty-six times as big as she will do next February. In April, however, only a small part of her illumined face was turned toward us, and we saw her through a small telescope like the moon of a day old. At present we can see just half her disk, like the moon at first quarter. She was at her greatest brilliancy a month ago, but even now she is forty times as bright as Vega or Arcturus.

JUPITER AND SATURN

In the evening we see Jupiter and Saturn in the west, setting about four hours after sunset. The lower and brighter one is Jupiter, a huge globe more than 1300 times as big as our earth, accompanied by nine moons, some of which are almost as big as the planet Mars. Saturn has three beautiful rings and also nine moons. Four of the moons of Jupiter and the rings of Saturn are plainly visible with a three inch telescope. As these planets are getting nearer the sun every day their brightness is somewhat diminished.

BRIGHT SUMMER STARS

All the important summer constellations and a very large number of first magnitude stars are now visible. During the early part of the month when the moon is absent it will be a good time to see the splendid Milky Way, or Silver River. In the north the Big Dipper is now swinging upside down toward the northwest. In the east may be seen the brilliant Vega, the brightest star north of the equator, of the constellation Lyra; and Deneb, the tail of the Swan. Vega, Deneb, and the North Star form a right angled tiangle, with the right angle at Deneb. The last named is one of the faintest of first magnitude stars, but that is because it is so far away. The star that we see is simply the light in its passage through infinite space, and as it strikes us here it has already been 325 years on its journey, moving at the rate of 186,000 miles per second, or six billion miles per year.

Deneb also marks the head end of the northern cross, now almost upside down. You see four stars in a straight line, with a cross piece consisting of three stars passing through the one next to Deneb. Do not fail to trace this out. At, the farther, or foot end, is a beautiful double star, which can be so distinguished with a good opera, glass or small telescope. The two component stars are yellow and blue. The study of double stars is one of the most fascinating in all the realms of astronomy. Some star gazers have given their whole attention to this subject, but even for the veriest amateur the sight through a telescope of a double star is always a delightful surprise, especially since the component stars show up such extraordinary colors. Try your spy glass on the little star, just north of Vega, making a small equilateral triangle with Vega and another little star near it. This star, known as Epsilon Lyrae, may be seen to be a double with a good sharp eye, unaided, but is in reality a quadruple star, and may be so distinguished with a small telescope. All four stars are physically connected and form a mighty system revolving around each other with clocklike precision.

To the other side of Epsilon Lyrae is a small parallellogram, consisting of four faint stars, which always accompany Vega in the same relative positions, and help to distinguish it if you are otherwise in doubt about the identity of Vega. The one on the upper line remote from Epsilon Lyrae is also a double and a variable star. This means that as these two stars revolve around each other at regular intervals, so that once in thirteen days the star fluctuates in brightness by as much as whole magnitude. There are thousands of double stars, the celebrated American astronomer Burnham having catalogued 13,000 of them in only a part of the sky.

ARCTURUS, SWIFTEST STAR

To find Arcturus, one of the most celebrated stars, being mentioned in the book of Job, and carefully observed by all ancient astronomers in Egypt, Greece, China, etc., you must follow with your eye the curved handle of the Big Dipper outwards. The first bright star on your way is Arcturus, while almost an equal distance beyond, still on the curve, is Spica. Arcturus is one of the brightest stars, ranking almost equally with Vega, Capella, and Rigel. In ancient legendary maps he is pictured as a tall hunter accompanied by two dogs in a leash, and the three seem to be chasing the Greater Bear (otherwise known as the Big Dipper) around the Pole. When Arcturus is high in the heavens his color seems a golden yellow, a mature star, therefore, in the height of his glory and strength. In 1858, when Donati's comet blazed with great splendor in the northern sky, Arcturus shone brilliantly right through the comet close to the head. But its light was not dimmed in the least, showing how thin and airy the comet really was.

Arcturus is one of the swiftest moving bodies that we have any knowledge of, for he rolls along through space at the enormous speed of 200 or 300 miles per second. When we recollect that a rifle ball from the most highly perfected machine rifle only makes about half a mile the first second, and soon loses its velocity, and then learn that this star, many million times as big as our earth, rushes on apparently self-impelled, more than 500 times as swift as a rifle ball, we are dazed with wonder.

We see what a fraud it is to speak of such as "Fixed" stars. In fact, all the fixed stars are moving very swiftly indeed. Our own sun is a "fixed" star, but is in reality tearing along at a pace that would make the fastest aeroplane seem like the slowest snail. But while those stars that have motions of from ten to twenty miles a second have not apparently changed their position in the thousands of years since stars were first accurately observed, a few of them, notably Sirius and Arcturus, have been seen to move along. Sirius, it has been found, has moved two minutes in a hundred years, which would mean that it has moved a distance equal to the diameter of the moon in 1600 years. But Arcturus has moved about twice as far in that time, having carefully observed from the time of the great astronomer Ptolomey, nearly 1800 years ago. Arcturus is so far away that a hundred years are required for its light to come to us, and it shines with a brilliance equal to at least 500 suns like our own.

THE SOUTHERN CROSS

Other constellations and stars of the first magnitude that may be seen this and next month are Altair, the bright star in Aquila, the Eagle, and Antares, that bright red star in the Scorpion. These may be left to be described another month. But during the summer people in south China will be privileged to see Alpha Centauri and Beta Centauri, which form the "Pointers" to the Southern Cross, Alpha Centauri, the one to the left and farthest from the Cross, is noted as being the nearest of all the first magnitude stars, almost the nearest of all the stars, being only four "light years" away. While it is apparently superior to Vega in brilliancy it is actually quite the smallest of all the first magnitude stars, and only holds its place as such because of its nearness.

But let us not think that we are within easy speaking distance, nor need we fear that the inhabitants of planets around Alpha Centauri will overhear our loudest conversation. If you wish to draw the universe to scale, and include the orbits of the planets of our solar system as far as Neptune on a sheet of paper the size of the China Press (and remember Neptune is nearly three billion miles away); then your paper would have to be extended two miles farther to make it possible to indicate the position of Alpha Centauri, Sirius, the next star in order, would be four miles away.

"BEADS OF JADE."

(From the Chinese, written 769 B. C.)

My lord is gone away to serve the King.
The pigeons homing at the set of sun
Are side by side upon the courtyard wall,
And far away I hear the herdsmen call
The goats upon the hill when day is done.
But I, I know not when he will come home,
I live the days alone.

My lord is gone away to serve the King.
I hear a pigeon stirring in the nest,
And in the field a pheasant crying late.
—She has not far to go to find her mate.
There is a hunger will not let me rest.
The days have grown to months and months to years,
And I have no more tears.

TEXACO

TEXACO THUBAN COMPOUND
a liquid lubricant for—
Differentials, Worm Drives, and Transmissions of Automobiles

Texaco Thuban Compound is a heavy, mineral lubricant—not a grease.

It gives the best obtainable lubricating service because it sticks to gear teeth. No grade, speed, nor any other adverse condition will make "Thuban" sling off. It forms a protective cushion of oil which prevents metal contact when the gears mesh, thus reducing friction and increasing power. Notice the decrease of noise when "Thuban" is used. There is no clash and grind when the gears shift.

A very little "Thuban" goes a long way. You need only enough to bathe the gear teeth as they revolve in the power housing. This is because of its adhesive power which keeps a film on them at all times. "Thuban" is a real economy because you must use it sparingly for best results.

The Fable Of The Two Honolulu Canaries And The Willing Performer

A very attractive Just-Outer knew two Birds who called on her every Thursday Evening, and brought their Ukes along.

They were Conventional Young Men of the Kind that you see wearing Spring Overcoats in the Clothing Advertisements. One was named Fred and the other was Eustace.

The Mothers of the Neighborhood often remarked, "What Perfect Manners Fred and Eustace have!"

Merely as an aside it may be added that Fred and Eustace were more Popular with the Mothers than they were with the Steppers, although no one could say a Word against either of them. Only it was rumored in Keen Society that they didn't Belong.

The Fact that they went Calling in a Crowd, and took their Instruments along, may give the Acute Reader some Idea of the Life that Fred and Eustace held out to the Young Women of their Acquaintance.

'SHE'S A BUZZER'

The Debutante's name was Myrtle. Her Parents were Night Watches, and did not encourage her to receive Callers except such as were known to be Exemplary Young Men. Fred and Eustace were a few of those who got past the Turn-Stile. Myrtle always let on to be glad to see them, and they regarded her as a Darned Swell Girl.

Fred's Cousin came from St. Paul on a Visit, and one Day, in the Street, he saw Myrtle, and noticed that Fred tipped his Hat and registered both Surprise and Delight.

"Oh, Queen of Sheba!" exclaimed the Cousin from St. Paul whose name was Gus, as he stood stock still, and watched Myrtle's not-so-long Gown disappear around a Corner. "She's a Buzzer! Do you know her well?"

"I know her Quite Well," replied Fred, coldly. "She is a Charming Girl."

"She is all of that. You're a great Describer. And now what Night are you going to take me around to let me do the Howdy and lie about Grand Opera!"

HEMMED AND HAWED

Fred very naturally Hemmed and Hawed. It must be remembered that Myrtle was a member of an Excellent Family, and had been schooled in the Proprieties, and it was not to be supposed that she would crave the Society of slanty old Gus, who had an abounding Crust and was eight times as Fresh as the Mountain Air.

He was the Kind of Fellow who would see a Girl twice, and then, upon meeting her the Third Time, he would go up and straighten her Throat-Latch for her, and call her by her First Name.

Put him into a Strange Company—en route to a Picnic—and by the time the Baskets were unpacked he would have a Blonde all to himself, and she would have traded her Fan for his College Pin.

If a Fair-Looker on the Street happened to glance at him Hard he would run up and seize her by the Mit and convince her that they had Met. And he always Got Away with it, too.

In a Department Store, while waiting for the Cash Boy to come back with the Change, he would find out the Girl's Name, her Favorite Flower and where a Letter would reach her.

A FAST WORKER

Upon entering a Parlor Car at St. Paul he would select a Chair next to the Most Promising One in Sight, and ask her if she cared to have the Shade lowered.

Before the Train cleared the Yards he would have the Porter bringing a Foot-Stool for the lady.

At Hastings he would be asking her if she wanted Something to Read.

At Red Wing he would be telling her that she resembled Ethel Barrymore, and showing her his Watch, left to him by his Grandfather, a Prominent Virginian.

At La Crosse he would be reading the Menu Card to her, and telling her how different it is when you have Some One to join you in a Bite.

At Milwaukee he would go out and buy a Bouquet for her, and when they rode into Chicago they would be looking out of the same Window, and he would be arranging for her Baggage with the Transfer Man. After that they would be Old Pals.

Now, Fred and Eustace had been at School with Gus, and they had seen him in Action and there were not disposed to Introduce him into One of the most Exclusive Homes in the City.

ONLY NEEDED A START

They had known Myrtle for many Years, but they did not dare to Address her by her First Name, and they were Dead Sure that if Gus pulled any of that Traveling Salesman Stuff on her she would be offended and, naturally enough, they would be Blamed for bringing him into her Life.

But Gus insisted. He said he had caught a flash of Myrt, and she suited him from the Ground up, and he proposed to have Friendly Doings with her.

At last they told him they would take him if he promised to Behave. Fred warned him that Myrtle would frown down any attempt to be Familiar on Short Acquintance, and Eustace said that as long as he had known Myrtle he had never Presumed to be Free and Forward with her. He had simply played the Ukelele. That was as Far Along as he had ever got.

Gus told him not to Worry about him. All he asked was a Start. He said he was a Willing Performer, but as yet he never had been Disqualified for Crowding.

Fred and Eustace took this to mean that he would not Overplay his System, so they escorted him to the House.

LOOKED HER IN THE EYE

As soon as he had been Presented Gus showed her where to sit on the Sofa, then he placed himself about Six Inches away and began to Buzz, looking her straight in the Eye.

He said that when he first saw her he Mistook her for Miss Prentice, who was said to be the Most Beautiful Girl in St. Paul, only when he came closer, he saw it couldn't be Miss Prentice, because Miss Prentice didn't have such Lovely Hair.

Then he asked for the Month of her Birth and told her Fortune, thereby coming nearer to Holding her Hand within Eight Minutes than Eustace had come in a Lifetime.

"Play something, Boys," he Ordered, just as if he had paid them Money to come along and make Music for him.

They unlimbered their Dew-Dads and began to play something from "Sally."

He asked Myrtle if she had seen the New Moon. She replied that she had not, so they went Outside.

When Fred and Eustace finished the first Piece, Gus appeared at the open Window, and asked them to play "Feather Your Nest," which was one of his Favorites.

So they played that, and when they had Concluded there came a Voice from the Outer Darkness, and it was the Voice of Myrtle. She said: "I'll tell you what to Play! play 'Kiss Me Again.'"

BACKED INTO A SIDING

Fred and Eustace exchanged Glances. They began to Perceive that they had been backed into a Siding. With a few Potted Palms in front of them, and two Cards from the Union, they would have been just the same as a Hired Orchestra.

But they played another Selection and felt peeved. Then they went to the Window and looked out. Gus and Myrtle were sitting in the Hammock which had quite a pitch toward the Center. Gus had braced himself by Holding to the Back of the Hammock.

He did not have his Arm around Myrtle, but he had it Extended in a Line parallel with her Back.

What he had done wouldn't Justify a Girl in saying, "Sir!" but it started a Real Scandal with Fred and Eustace. They saw that the only Way to Get Even with her was to go Home without saying "Good Night." So they slipped out the Side Door, shivering with Indignation.

After that, for several Weeks, Gus kept Myrtle so Busy that she had no Time to think of considering other Candidates. He sent Books to her Mother, and allowed the Old Gentleman to take Chips away from him at Poker.

They were Married in the Autumn and Father-in-law took Gus into the Firm, saying that he had needed a good Pusher and Mixer for a Long Time.

At the Wedding the two Uke Players were permitted to act as Ushers.

Moral! To get a fair Trial of Speed, use a Pace-Maker.
